

Richard Frisbie - Bio - Chef, publisher, gardener, freelance writer Richard Frisbie combines his passions for food, wine, and travel with his curiosity about other cultures to create articles that appear online, in major print publications, and are collected in travel and culinary anthologies. Most recently, for the book "Savoring Gotham, A Food Lover's Companion to NYC" he and the other contributors earned praise from the largest publisher in the world, Oxford University Press, who referred to them as "the most notable food experts."

When he's not scouring the globe for new discoveries, or cooking up a storm, Richard is sharing his recipes and adventures on social media under his own name.

Besides that, Frisbie's sophisticated palette and insights make him a favorite among esteemed publications such as Ensemble Travel, Vacations, Wild Northeast, luxuryweb.com, and EDGE Publications, the largest network of LGBT publications in the world. Besides contributing articles to gonomad.com and travelingboy.com, he also publishes a product review column on Travelingboy (<https://travelingboy.com/travel/author/frisbie/>) for travel gear, books and accessories.

The Spanish Tourism Board invites Richard to Spain four or five times a year. Since October 2018 he's been to the Basque region of Spain, Madrid Food Fusion Show, and Mallorca, with two trips to Castilla y Leon (he declined one) scheduled for this September. Each trip results in 3 – 5 articles, numerous social media posts, and a few videos for a total potential readership of more than 5 million.

CLIPS - An article on October's Basque trip appeared on the 6th highest-traffic travel website for October 2018:
